

Fifth ABA Residential Advanced Trial Advocacy Course Melbourne 17—21 January 2011

Registration for the fifth ABA Residential Advanced Trial Advocacy Course is now open.

The course will be held from 17-21 January 2011 in Melbourne.

Places in the course are limited to people with seniority of at least two years at the private Bar. The Course is designed for experienced advocates who wish to take that next step in their professional development.

There are places available for up to 42 barristers from around Australia.

The coaching faculty will comprise top senior Australian and international barristers, judges and performance coaches.

The course provides an opportunity for barristers to develop their advocacy skills by preparing a case and experimenting with a number of styles of performance to see which is the most effective for that advocate on that occasion.

Rarely do barristers have the opportunity to see their own performances played back so that they can be examined by the barrister themselves. And never in professional practice is there an opportunity to have a number of senior practitioners analyse performances and provide intensive and supportive feedback about ways to improve. This course provides each of these elements and much more.

The cost for the course is $3,400 incl GST and covers all course materials and readings; course venue, equipment, transcript, five nights accommodation (Monday-Friday nights), and all meals, including a final course dinner.
