The decision of the NSW Court of Appeal in Lodin v Lodin [2017] NSWCA 327 provides a timely reminder of the circumstances that justify a former spouse being regarded as an object of testamentary recognition by a deceased when making an application for provision pursuant to s59(1)(b) of the Succession Act (2006). The paper identifies the history of the case from the trial until the refusal of special leave in the High Court earlier this year and considers the lessons learnt and identifies some practical matters when conducting an ex - spouse's Family Provision application.
